PREFACE.

TENTH EDITION.

In presenting this new edition of the "Adams Cable Codex" for the patronage of the travelling public, we would state that every care and attention has been given to the use of code words, which now conform to the requirements of the International Bureau. No responsibility, however, is assumed by the publishers for any errors arising from the use of this code. Makers of other codes are requested to make terms with the publishers before using any of the special features contained in the "Adams Cable Codex."

The present issue is an enlarged edition of over 200 pages, and is published especially in the interest of the travelling public, and also contains much matter of value for commercial purposes to bankers, brokers and the business community at large. The extended circulation of this code is proven by the fact that upwards of 85,000 copies have been sold since the first issue was placed on the market. The majority of those who travel have investment or business interests at home about which they require information while abroad, and to this class the large number of pages referring to "Buying," "Selling," "Market," "Condition of Firms," etc., will commend themselves as of especial value. In this, i. e., the TENTH EDITION, we have made a number of necessary corrections for the improvement of the code, certain features of which require changing to be up to date.

The saving made in using the code in cabling is very large, and often equal to many times the cost of the code book, to say nothing of the fact that matters of privacy and intended for private and confidential use cannot be read by any other person than the one holding duplicate copy of the cipher book giving translations.

The value of this code will be seen by reference to the index, which covers the subject matter, and is intended to show the user where to find quickly the sentences referring to any especial subject. Particular attention is requested to pages 40, 42, 72, 117, 131, 141, 159, 162 and 202. On page 42 will be found a number of sentences by use of which messages can be sent and delivered to a third party, who may not happen to have this code. On page 202 is given the explanation of the way cables are sent out of the "Adams Cable Codex" to correspondents who have no copy of the code.

This valuable feature of cabling in cipher without either the sender or the receiver having a code (see, page 202) is one which is meeting a frequent necessity. This code not only contains the greatest amount of information for travellers' needs, but it is also the lowest-priced code book yet issued, thus accounting for the immense sale. The low price (25 and 50 cents) enables frequent purchase of codex in case copy is lost or mislaid.

To those unused to cable codes let us say that before leaving home it will be necessary for both the traveller and the friend at home to select some distinguishing cable address. For instance, to send a message to "F. O. Houghton & Co., 115 State St., Boston," will entail an expense of cabling nine words for the address alone. while a despatch can be addressed in two words to "DELTA, BOS-TON," our cable address, and on its receipt at the cable office, it will be sent at once to us, our full name and address being registered, together with our cable name, at the head offices of all the different companies in Boston.

The friend who is to cable from abroad must also select some special cable address, but we do not recommend, on account of the trouble and expense involved - the usual cost being one guinea the registration of his cable name at the telegraph offices in any of the large cities, unless he intends to remain for some time in one particular city. In travelling hurriedly from place to place it is better to have messages sent in the care of a banker, an hotel, or an exchange (preference being given to the place where a telegram will be most likely to reach the receiver at any hour of the day or night), nearly all of which have a cable address, so that messages sent in their care will be promptly delivered. As a rule we should say that telegrams sent in care of the hotel where one is stopping would be soonest delivered. When it is understood beforehand it will not be necessary to sign messages, unless telegrams are being sent to or received from different parties in the same place, when it is well that each bear the cable signature of the sender.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS .- On page 66 will be found a sentence "ELUCIDATE," announcing a change of one's cable name or address. Also see pages 80 and 81 for changes of cable name or address.

In closing we must add one word of caution, i.e., when making up a message be sure to write clearly and distinctly. It should be understood, especially in cipher messages, that the telegraph operator has to deal with letters and not words. In writing a message, therefore, every letter should stand out so clearly and distinctly that there can be no chance of error.
Furthermore, in sending and receiving messages, do not fail to take time to read the telegram carefully, and re-check it to and from the code. Too much care cannot be taken in the translation of cable messages, as an error may cost both the sender and the receiver a deal of trouble, worry and expense.

This code is the result of many months' labor, and must commend itself to anyone who has to use the ocean cables, or the overland telegraph lines. It does not, of course, cover every exigency which may arise, and we doubt if any code could be gotten up that would do this. Any suggestions which the users of this code may have to make, which will add to its value and efficiency, we shall be glad to receive, and may be able to embody them in a later edition.

Copies of the ADAMS CABLE CODEX can be obtained on application to the addresses named below, and at following prices:

YOU CAN CABLE IN CIPHER TO FRIENDS ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE OCEAN, EVEN IF THE FRIENDS HAVE NO CODE.

PARTIES in America desiring to communicate quickly with friends across the water can do so by using The Adams Cable Codex. On page 42 of this code will be found words like: "Bushiness." Translated, this word means:—

Please put the following in plain language by using this code and deliver to ———, explaining at same time that I send this message in cipher through you in order to be more explicit, to insure quick delivery and save expense.

In the blank space it is intended to insert the name and address, i.e., "John Jones, Lenox," or "John Jones, Accursed." The latter is a code word meaning "Care Baring Bros. & Co., London." Receiver of the message will then understand that contents of translation of the code words should be communicated to the third party mentioned. In the above-mentioned cases the telegrams would read "Bushiness, John Jones, Lenox," or "Bushiness, John Jones, Accursed."

By telegraphing to Delta, Boston, the cable address of F. O. Houghton & Co., 115 State Street, Boston, the forwarding of cable messages as mentioned above to parties not holding a copy of the code can be accomplished in America; or in London by telegraphing to Compodelta, London, the cable address of Eden Fisher & Co., 6, 7, and 8 Clement's Lane, Lombard Street, E. C., who have on sale The Adams Cable Codex.
